'They should call it all-day sickness' says William as expectant Kate takes turn for the worse

10 DECEMBER 2012

Kate Middleton has suffered a setback in her recovery from severe morning sickness, when she took a turn for the worse on Sunday after spending the weekend resting at Kensington Palace.

The day before, Prince William had attended a charity tennis gala with the likes of Jude Law and Boris Becker, and he had spoken with guests about his wife's condition, telling them: "I don't know why they call it morning sickness – they should call it all-day and all-night sickness."
